

Benjamin Boiton

Partner

Description

Benjamin advises companies and local authorities on all matters relating to public procurement law and complex contracts, public competition law and the economic development of the public domain, particularly in the energy (hydroelectric concessions, deployment of hydrogen for industry and mobility, gas distribution concessions, etc.), transport and infrastructure sectors.

He also advises private operators holding public service concessions in the context of their restructuring operations both on regulatory and contractual aspects.

As a specialist in French and European State aid law, he assists operators and local authorities in setting up projects co-financed by European structural funds and in drawing up notification dossiers for new aid or aid schemes before the European Commission.

Since 2015, he has been providing training in public contract litigation (Master's Degree in Public Contracts at the Jean Moulin Lyon III University).

Experiences

- Lawyer at the Adamas law firm since 2012
- Partner at the Adamas law firm since 2019

Formation

- Legal Qualification Certificate (2012)
- Master's degree in Public Business Law – Law and Business Economics Institute (Institut de Droit et d'Economie des Affaires) Jean Moulin Lyon III University
- Magister degree in Public Business Law – Law and Business Economics Institute (Institut de Droit et d'Economie des Affaires) Jean Moulin Lyon III University